We are creating an AI powered social media platform designed for North American university students and research industry partners. This platform will be completely free and accessible across multiple devices, including desktops, laptops, tablets, and smartphones.

The purpose of this social media platform is to foster social connections and content sharing among students and industry professionals. Users will also gain access to free courses, paid or unpaid mentorship opportunities, and research support. Additionally, the platform will provide up-to-date information on academic conferences. The platform is equipped with a machine leaning model. The model will recommend free courses, reading materials, and video tutorials tailored to your needs.

In this survey, you will review and interpret data security and use of machine learning model terms and conditions similar to those presented when signing up for popular social media platforms such as Facebook or Instagram. This study aims to examine whether the way these terms and conditions are presented affects users' understanding of data use for machine learning development.
